INTRODUCTION TO LANDSCAPE ARCHITECTURE

SITE DESIGN FINAL REVIEW

UW Canoe House and Water Activities Center, Montlake Cut

SITE

The University of Washington, at the southeast corner of campus, is adjacent to a landmark of change and the shifting waterlines of the region, the Montlake Cut. The site is an important campus location with easy access to the water and other nearby ecological and cultural sites of Lake Washington. The site includes the Canoe House, the Water Activities Center, several water related resources, including storage and rental of boats and canoes, a small vista park, a climbing structure, and a stretch of Montlake Cut.

PROGRAM

In response to a campus interest in establishing a series of cohesive walking routes across UW, to experience intimate details found in the character of the landscape, students have created a SITE design along a PATHWAY campus walking route that they have developed. The goal of this strategic SITE design is that it will build interest in the significance of the urban ecology of the site, and inspire additional scales of design along the larger PATHWAY route. Students have been encouraged to reveal an ecology of life - of movement through. Students have been asked to consider elements landscape design, to develop a strategic experience of a site characteristic through movement, and have been encouraged to address the urban ecology of their proposals.
